This upper side navigation area is broken into two sections. The top section is standard for all groups and what displays depends on who the viewer is and what the group privacy settings are.

- Group Home comes back here if the user goes deeper into the site.
- Photo Gallery only appears if there are photos in the gallery and if the group organizer has made it viewable by the viewer's group. This goes to a page that displays this group's albums and thumbnails of the photos contained in that album. The visitor can click the thumbnail to get a larger version, similar to the way kodakgallery does it.
- Contact Us is a simple form page that sends an email to the organizer.
- The Become a Member link goes to a page where visitors can see text about the benefits of joining this group, and an area where the visitor can request membership into the group. The process of requesting membership requires grouvia membership, so grouvia registration will become part of the group membership request process. The user will also be given the option to log in if they are already a grouvia member.
- The Member Directory appears only if organizer has made it public in the settings. From here, registered grouvia users can send a grouvia message to any member. Unregistered visitors cannot send messages to members.
- Discussion Forum link goes to that module. It will be a plug-in module so the design flexibility may be limited.
- Custom Folders are folders the organizer can create. Covered later.

These are organizer activities and are covered in detail in the next section.

This is the “about us” copy the organizer defines in the group settings page. The title is fixed, the paragraphs are limited to X characters, to fit in the box.

This is kind of like a film strip that displays randomly selected photos from the group's photo album. The visitor can scroll left and right through the thumbnails and click on them to open up a large version in a slideshow mode, like in kodakgallery.com.

If the organizer has set the photo gallery to a higher privacy level, this whole section will not display.

Announcements are basic text messages without links or special formatting. A title and a paragraph of text, that's it. Every announcement that has not expired will appear here, and will push the boundary down to fit. No frame-based scroll bars or anything fancy.

The calendar widget on the group home is a “dumbed down” version of the one on the member home page. It’s the current month with indicators of which dates have events. There is no navigation or click-thru capability. There is a previous/next arrow button pair to allow the user to scroll through the months.

Upcoming events display here in the same format as on the member home page. However, the action buttons would not appear for non-group members. Clicking an event will open the same subwindow as in the member home page to show details. Events the organizer has defined as Private would only show for those user
